“ To my wonderful Aunt Nancy;
I still can't believe you're gone and I think of you daily. When I was a young girl I secretly hoped I would grow up to be just like you. You were always very entertaining and funny with your crooked little smirky smile and you never took any bull from anyone. You zipped around in your cool little sports car and loved sports, animals, art and music. You were unique and independent and I was extremely lucky to call you mine.

“ Nancy was loved by family, friends, teachers, parents and students alike.. After reading the many comments and stories of my remarkable kid sister, I will share this poem, that Nancy wrote, which some of you have read before.. It tells her life story very well,

DIFFERENT DRUM

*If there's a different way of doing things
I'm not the one to know
Order makes no sense to me
My ducks aren't in a row*

*I march to a different drummer
The beat is all my own
In a senseless way, it makes sense to me
It's all I've ever known.*

*If I-m content with the way I live
And happy to greet each day
Does it matter the beat I follow
As I go my illogical way?*

*I've decided it wasn't important
My world is where I'll be
I'll march with that different drummer
And answer only to me*

“ Nancy never wasted a moment in her quest to live her life the way she wanted to -- with great affection for her friends, absolutely no concern for "the rules", and the wonderful ability to make us laugh.

Dave, I just heard the news from Elsie. Quite a shock, always looked forward to seeing her at the high school reunions. Not hard to believe that one of the craziest girls from our class made a great teacher.

Dave, Nick and Elsie,

Although I lost touch with Nancy many years ago, I remember -- with great fondness -- my unlikely high school friendship with the class rebel. I especially remember Mrs. Muratory's (?) history class, because Nancy always seemed to be banished to the hall. She was funny and feisty and ahead of her time. I'm glad we all remember her the same way

Nancy Tabbert taught all three of my children in the seventh grade. She had a knack for bringing out what was special about each student. She will be fondly remembered.
