“ Around 1956 one of the monthly magazines did a serialization of the American novel “ Old Yeller”

I would have been about 6 years old at the time and not yet able to read

My Mother made a special point of reading this to myself and my Sister Ruth Ann.

I remember the anticipation of her reading the next chapter to us. She would stretch it out over several days and then we would have to wait for the next magazine to arrive.

I remember how taken with the story I was and how well she read it. I also remember having to wait for the next edition so we could find out what happened next.

I remember not wanting the story to end. It was so good and I could see the characters so clearly in my mind’s eye

In my mind two lessons were taught here. Firstly how wonderful books were and how precious a gift it was to read.

Secondly she perhaps unknowingly taught us how to delay gratification by having to wait for the story to continue.

To this day I love reading and books! I am grateful for her early lesson and how she shared her love of books.

“ I remember her as my Aunt Ruth Parkhill during World War II. I haven't seen her since Uncle Doug was killed in battle in France, but she was so gentle and kind then, as all the comments here testify. RIP

“ Sleepovers at my grandma's house were special. What kid wouldn't like teasing their little brother because he had to make the trek down the long dark spooky hallway to the back bedroom to sleep, staying up late and eating popcorn and candy watching tv on the pull out couch of course grandma was right there beside me munching away. We would talk about nothing and everything for hours, she always listened to me even if it was with her eyes closed. My grandma made some of the strangest concoctions and combinations for breakfast I was never brave enough to try them but breakfast was never boring!
